Availability of Synacthen

We have received advice that there is a nationwide shortage of Synacthen (Novartis) for diagnostic testing of the hypothalamic-pituitary-adrenal axis. This is confined to Australia and is due to the batch destined for delivery failing a quality assurance measure. Novartis are working to restore supply. The Australian distributor for Synacthen is Aspen. Speaking with them directly, they expect another shipment to come in at the end of June. Limited quantities may be available in some centres, but we urge clinicians to confine short Synacthen testing to urgent cases until supply is restored. Sourcing alternative brands of ACTH 1-24 via the TGA Special Access Scheme may be possible.

Invitation to participate in a research project: Translation of research evidence to clinical practice via social media

You are receiving this invitation because you have been identified as a health researcher, practitioner or student who may be interested in participating in a study investigating translating research evidence into clinical practice.

This research is being conducted by an international team of researchers and clinicians, led by Monash University, and has the approval of the Monash University Human Research Ethics Committee (CF 14/1372 - 2014000640).

We would like to know your thoughts on the potential of social media as a direct information-sharing pathway between researchers and clinical practitioners via a short, anonymous on-line survey. Please click on the link below to complete the survey.

You will then have the opportunity to opt-in to an interview, (for which you will receive either a $ 50 movie voucher or charity donation) and/or a trial of receiving best evidence practice points via social media from the world leading Monash Tendon Research Group.

Kind Regards,

Dr. Stephen Maloney

Find an Endocrinologist

The Endocrine Society of Australia receives regular enquiries to recommend an endocrinologist with particular interests or expertise. Endocrinology is a broad field, which includes some very common conditions, but also some very rare ones. As a result, people who have rare conditions may benefit from seeing a specialist with additional experience or expertise. The Society comprises clinical endocrinologists and also scientists, who research endocrine disorders but do not see patients. Clinical members of the Society have been invited to submit their contact details and self-nominated areas of interest. Please note that the Endocrine Society of Australia is providing this as a community service to help patients find a suitable endocrinologist (considering both geographical issues and area of interest). The Society is not endorsing or recommending any of the listed clinicians or their degree of expertise.

The general public will be able to search for an Endocrinologist in this section:
